About workshop

Innovation cell is mandatory for every college as per the instruction of Kerala University of Health Sciences (KUHS). It's highly essential for the accreditation by KUHS and NAAC. Government of India and Kerala started many startup programs for the students to encourage innovations. They are also providing grants for startups and incubation centres. REPORT OF WORKSHOP ON WRITING RESEARCH GRANTS

We are extremely delighted that we could able to conduct a workshop on Writing For research grants. It was really informative and an enriching learning experience for all. Beneficiaries: Faculty and MSc Nursing students of Amala College of Nursing

Objectives:

- Explain grant writing process
 - Describe steps of writing and submission of research grants
- Discuss the process of funding and follow up of research grants

The program was conducted on 25/11/20212 at lecture hall III. The session startedat 9.00 am with a silent prayer. The program commenced with a welcome address by Mrs Rinu David. The session was taken by an expert speaker Dr. Ajith T A, Professor, Biochemistry department, Amala Institute of Medical Sciences, Thrissur.

Dr Ajith explained that most researchers in health and science come across grant proposals or applications at some point in their careers. In fact, many positions depend on them, whether they are doctoral students who require fellowships, postgraduates setting up relatively simple projects as they start employment, or more senior staff who need to have a steady stream of research projects. Although a significant amount of money is available from governmental bodies, charities and commercial organizations, there is a large pool of researchers, so competition can be very competitive.

Dr Ajith discussed the steps for writing a successful grant proposal which includes : Identify an idea: It all starts with an idea. What are you trying to find out with your study? What makes your study different or novel? How will you conduct your research? All of this will be important in searching for a suitable funder.

Research the funder and topic, write the technical section: This will be the most difficult step for many researchers. Make sure all the formatting is correct and all the required details are included in each section.

Grant proposals are to be treated as a project with a defined deliverable or end result for the money sought. Projects must show tangible results or funding will not be granted. A successful grant proposal is one that is carefully prepared, planned, and packaged.

WORKSHOP- 2

REPORT OF WORKSHOP ON OVERVIEW OF QUALITATIVE RESEARCH

We are extremely delighted that we could able to conduct a workshop on types, steps and data analysis of qualitative research. It was really informative and an enriching learning experience for all.

Beneficiaries: Faculty and MSc Nursing students of Amala College of Nursing

Objectives

- Explain the types in qualitative research
- Describe the steps in qualitative research
- Discuss the data analysis in qualitative research

The program was conducted on 2/12/2022 through virtual platform (Google meet). The session started at 2 pm with a silent prayer. The program commenced with a welcome address by Mrs Rinu David, Assistant Professor, Amala college of Nursing. The session was taken by an expert speaker Dr Namitha Subramaniam, Professor, MOSC college of nursing, Kolenchery. The participants were really benefitted out of this workshop.

Dr Namitha explained that qualitative research involves collecting and analyzing non-numerical data to understand concepts, opinions, or experiences. It can be used to gather in-depth insights into a problem or generate new ideas for research. It is a type of research that explores and provides deeper understanding into real-world problems. Instead of collecting numerical data points or intervene or introduce treatments just like in quantitative research, qualitative research helps generate hypotheses as well as further investigate and understand quantitative data. Qualitative research is used to understand how people experience the world.

Common approaches include grounded theory, ethnography, action research, phenomenological research, and narrative research. It answers the how and why instead of how many or how much. It could be structured as a stand-alone study, purely relying on qualitative data or it could be part of mixed-methods research that combines qualitative and quantitative data. Qualitative research involves obtaining deep insight into why people behave the way they do.

Dr Namitha discussed that one of the strengths of qualitative research is its ability to explain processes and patterns of human behavior that can be difficult to quantify. Phenomena such as experiences, attitudes, and behaviors can be difficult to accurately capture quantitatively, whereas a qualitative approach allows participants themselves to explain how, why, or what they were thinking, feeling, and experiencing at a certain time or during an event of interest. Quantifying qualitative data is looking for themes and patterns that can be difficult to quantify and it is important to ensure that the context and narrative of qualitative work are not lost by trying to quantify something that is not meant to be quantified.

The participants were really benefitted out of this workshop. The session ended with a word of gratitude delivered by Mrs Aneeha V B, Assistant Professor, Amala college of Nursing. Thirty five participants benefitted out of this workshop.

REPORT OF WORKSHOP ON GROUNDED THEORY

We are extremely delighted that we could able to conduct a workshop on types, steps and data analysis of qualitative research. It was really informative and an enriching learning experience for all.

Beneficiaries: Faculty and MSc Nursing students of Amala College of Nursing

Objectives

- Explain the grounded theory
- Describe the steps in grounded theory
- Discuss the data analysis in grounded theory

The program was conducted on 3/12/2022 through virtual platform (Google meet). The session started at 2 pm with a silent prayer. The program commenced with a welcome address by Mrs Rinu David, Assistant Professor, Amala college of Nursing. The session was taken by an expert speaker Dr Rohini, Principal, M college of nursing, Kannur. The participants were really benefitted out of this workshop.

Dr Rohini explained that grounded theory is a qualitative method designed to help arrive at new theories and deductions. Researchers collect data through any means they prefer and then analyze the facts to arrive at concepts. In grounded theory research, the framework description guides the researcher's own interpretation of data.

A data description is the researcher's algorithm for collecting and organizing data while also constructing a conceptual model that can be tested against new observations.

Dr Rohini suggested that grounded theory is a qualitative method that enables you to study a particular phenomenon or process and discover new theories that are based on the collection and analysis of real world data. Unlike traditional hypothesis-deductive approaches of research, where you come up with a hypothesis and then try to prove/disprove it, grounded theory is an inductive approach where new theories are derived from the data. The process of data collection, data analysis, and theory development happen in an iterative process. Iterative data collection and analysis occurs until you reach theoretical saturation, the point at which additional data adds no additional insight into your new theory.

The participants were really benefitted out of this workshop. The session ended with a word of gratitude delivered by Mrs Aneeha V B, Assistant Professor, Amala college of Nursing. Thirty five participants benefitted out of this workshop.
